

Life Audit Worksheet

The purpose of this worksheet is to help you prioritize your life so that you can make time to study for the CPA exam.

Step #1: The Life Audit List

List out all of their hobbies, time wasters, work schedule, social activities, TV shows, video games, planned vacations, family time, and finally the CPA exam.

Next, in the priority column determine which activities in your life are more important than becoming a CPA vs not as important. Rank them in numerical order.

Step #2: Create Plan To Make Necessary Sacrifices

Now that you have prioritized your life, the next step is to determine what you will be sacrificing when you begin studying for the CPA exam and how you will use your priorities above the CPA exam as incentives to complete studying.

Example: If cable TV is a huge time waster, cancel your cable bill.

Example 2: If your family is the #1 priority, set a study goal to complete by a specific day and if you complete it go out and do something fun with your family etc...

What will you sacrifice in order to make time to study for the CPA exam?

What will you use as incentives to make time to study for the CPA exam?
